NOTICE.

THE CHINESE MAIL.

FROM and after the Chinese New Year's day (February 17, 1874) the Chinese Mail will be issued DAILY instead of THURSDAYS as heretofore. No change, however, will be made in the price of subscription, which will remain at $4 per annum.

The charges for advertisements are now assimilated to those of the China Mail. The unusual success which has attended the Chinese Mail makes it an admirable medium for advertisers.

The Conductors guarantee an eventual circulation of one thousand copies. It is already the most influential native journal published, and enjoys considerable prestige at the Ports of China and Japan, and at Singapore, Penang, Calcutta, San Francisco and Australia.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE
(Ex Army Med. Staff)
IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P.
Wood stated that Dr. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of Chlorodyne,
that the story of the Defendant, Freeman,
being the Inventor was deliberately untrue;
which he regretted had been sworn to.
The learned Judge further stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than
Dr. Browne's. See Times, July 12, 1864.
The public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than
DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
Remedial uses and action.

This invaluable remedy produces quiet, refreshing sleep; relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions,
and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium. Old and young may take it all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism,
Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T.
Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—
See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay:—"Chlorodyne
is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after sixteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

tables with a delicately flavoured beverage
which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft
by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure

(OZONIC OXYGEN)

The New Curative Agent, and only Reliable Remedy for Nervous and Liver Complaints.

This Phosphodyne combination is pronounced by the most eminent members of the Medical Profession to be unequalled for its power in replenishing the vitality of the body, by its supplying all the essential constituents of the blood and nervous substance, and for developing all the powers
and functions of the system to the highest degree.
It is agreeable to the palate, and innocent in its action, while retaining all its extraordinary properties; and as a specific, surpassing all the known therapeutic agents of the present day for the speedy and permanent cure of—Nervous Prostration, Liver Complaints, Palpitation of the Heart, Dizziness, Noises in the Head and Ears,
Loss of Energy and Appetite, Hypochondria,
Female Complaints, General Debility, Indigestion, Flatulence, Incessant Giddy or Head-ness, Sick Headache, Lassitude, Shortness of Breath, Trembling of the hands and limbs, Impaired Nutrition, Mental and Physical Depression, Consumption (in its first stages only), Timidity, Eruptions of the Skin, Impaired Sight and Memory, Nervous Fancies, Impoverished Blood,
Nervous Debility in all its Stages, Premature Decline, and all morbid conditions of the system arising from whatever cause. The action of the Phosphodyne is twofold—on the one hand it restores the principle which constitutes nervous energy, and on the other the most powerful blood and flesh generating agent known; therefore, a marvellous medicine for renovating impaired and broken-down constitutions. It quickly improves the functions of assimilation to such a degree,
that where for years an emaciated, anxious,
cadaverous, and semi-lytic condition has existed,
the flesh will rapidly increase in quantity and firmness, and the whole system return to a state of robust health. The Phosphodyne acts electrically upon the organisation; for instance, it assists nature to generate that human electricity
which renews and rebuilds the osseous, muscular, nervous, membranous, and organic systems. It operates on the system without exciting care or thought upon the individual as to the process.
It moves the lungs, liver, heart, kidneys, stomach,
and intestines, with a harmony, vigour, yet
mildness unparalleled in medicine.

The Phosphodyne gives back to the human structure, in a suitable form, the phosphoric or animating element of life, which has been wasted,
and exerts an important influence directly on the spinal marrow and nervous system, of a nutritive, tonic, and invigorating character, maintaining that buoyant energy of the brain and muscular system which renders the mind cheerful, brilliant, and energetic, entirely overcoming that dull, inactive, and sluggish disposition which many persons experience in all their actions.

The beneficial effects of the Phosphodyne are frequently shown from the first day of its administration, by a remarkable increase of nervous power, with a feeling of vigour and comfort to which the patient has long been unaccustomed.
Digestion is improved; the appetite increases wonderfully; the bowels become regular; the eyes brighter; the skin clear and healthy; and the hair acquires strength, showing the importance of the action of the Phosphodyne on the organs of nutrition.

Finally, the Phosphodyne maintains a certain degree of activity in the previously debilitated nervous system; it enables all debilitated organs to return to their sound state and perform their natural functions. Persons suffering from Nervous Debility, or any of the hundred symptoms which this distressing disease assumes, may rest assured of an effectual and even speedy cure by the judicious use of this most invaluable remedy.

Dr. BRIGHT'S PHOSPHODYNE
is sold only in Cases at 10s. 6d. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors
throughout the Globe.

Full Directions for Use, in the English,
French, German, Italian and Dutch Lan-

led to several imitations under somewhat similar names; purchasers of this medicine should therefore be careful to observe that each case bears the English Government Stamp, with the words Dr. Bright's Phos-

The Greatest Wonder of Modern Times!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

Persons suffering from weak or debiltated constitutions will discover that by the use of this wonderful medicine there is
"Health for all." The blood is the fountain of life, and its purity can be maintained by the use of these Pills.

Sir Samuel Baker, in his work entitled
"The Nile Tributaries in Abyssinia," says,
"I ordered the druggist Mahomet to inform the Fakay that I was a Doctor, and that I had the best medicines at the service of the sick, with advice gratis. In a short time I had many applicants, to whom I served out a quantity of Holloway's Pills.
These are most useful to an explorer, as possessing unmistakable purgative properties they create an undeniable effect upon the patient, which satisfies him of their value."

SIMPLE, SAFE AND CERTAIN!
HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT
Is a certain remedy for bad legs, bad breasts, and ulcerations of all kinds. It acts miraculously in healing ulcerations, curing skin diseases, and in arresting and subduing all inflammations.

Mr. J. T. Cooper, in his account of his extraordinary travels in China, published in 1871, says—"I had with me a quantity of Holloway's Ointment. I gave some to the people, and nothing could exceed their gratitude; and, in consequence, milk, fowls,
butter, and horse-feed poured in upon us,
until at last a tea-spoonful of Ointment
was worth a fowl and any quantity of peas, and the demand became so great that I was obliged to look up the small remaining stock."

Sold by all Chemists and Medicine Vendors throughout the World.

THE CHINA MAIL.

HONGKONG, SATURDAY, JUNE 17, 1876.

It is, we believe, a generally admitted fact, even by those who profess the warmest admiration for the peculiar institutions of America, that the Consular and Diplomatic system of that country is a decided failure.

Regarded not as a career but as a temporary provision in life, a gift conferred by the chief of the predominant party on the needy partisan, the American Civil Service in general estimation would appear to have become a system for furthering private interests, acting not so much against the foreign element amongst which its duties are performed, as against those unfortunate of its own nationals whose natural protectors its members are presumed to be.

The great object of the American Consular officer too often seems to be to get together within a short space of time as possible, (for the tenure is precarious), the largest amount of dollars practicable, method of discretion, and return home with his assets. High and honorable exceptions there are no doubt, but the number is in great disproportion to the full list.

The East has furnished a large majority of these exceptions; and in the persons of the gentlemen at Singapore, Hongkong, some of the Coast Ports, and especially in the late Consular chief at Shanghai, residents as well as citizens have imbibed a respect for the office founded upon the worthy qualities of the occupant. But circumstances have lately transpired in connection with an Eastern Consulate, which will go far to do away with the prevalent favourable impression.

Some few months since, certain circumstances were reported as having occurred in connection with the actions of the American Consul at Bangkok of so extraordinary a nature that they did not meet with the full credence they deserved. It appeared almost impossible that the matters referred to could have happened as detailed, and it certainly appeared as if personal feeling or some kindred motive had given a bias to the statements, and materially heightened their colour.

Some slight reference was made to the report by a contemporary, but we preferred to wait the result of the official investigation, which we felt sure would be instituted, before laying the matter before our readers.

This has now been done, and certainly the original charges would appear to have fallen far short of the facts developed. It would appear that even common decency had been set aside by the Consul in Siam, and that the Government to which he was accredited has been outraged, while the Citizens of the United States unfortunate enough to have been found within his jurisdiction have been subjected to indignities far more than any of those to the suppression of which their sturdy forefathers pledged their "lives," their "fortunes," and their "sacred honour."

It must be remembered that, there being no Envoy at Siam, the American Consul there is free to do almost what he pleases, and from his decisions there is no appeal except to the regular tribunals of the United States, which are somewhat remote.

Possessing full power over the goods and persons of all American Citizens, holding as it were their lives and liberties in his hand, removed far from any immediate control of his own Government, with no check upon his procedure, and responsible only to the Department of State, which is very jealous of and will not permit any interference on the part of the only department represented in the East, the Navy, if it will readily be perceived that, in the hands of an unscrupulous and needy man, this office might be made an instrument of extortion limited only by the means of the victims.

The ex parte charges of the Siamese Government which the Consul has failed to traverse and which have been forwarded to the U. S. Government, are that Mr. Chandler, an old resident in Siam and personal friend of the King, having been appointed the Commissioner for that country to the Centennial Exhibition, the Consul refused to allow him to leave the country and ordered the King to appoint his (the Consul's) son to that office, threatening him with the vengeance of his Government if he neglected his orders; and, on the King's refusal the Consul went to his palace, assaulted Mr. Chandler, who was at that time an occupant, and after abusing the King dragged Chandler away and locked him up in the Consulate prison.

That on the King sending an officer to ask the meaning of this outrage accompanied by a guard of honor, the Consul assaulted the officer, drove the guard into the water and wrote a most abusive letter to the King. That clause 3 of the American treaty providing that any and all Siamese in the employ of American citizens shall be amenable only to the laws of the United States, and cannot be interfered with during such term of service by the Siamese Government, the American Consul, on payment of a monthly stipend, furnished certificates of service to Siamese subjects, by which they were enabled to peddle liquors about the canals without any license from the spirit farmer, whereby the public revenue was defrauded in each case of some $200 per year—the Consul receiving about $65. That so many of these boats flying the American flag accumulated in the neighbourhood that the revenue was seriously affected and the spirit farmer was compelled, in self-defence, to appoint the Consul's son to an excise office at a liberal salary and one-half the confiscations. That in a few days the canals were entirely cleared of these boats, all their contents being seized and confiscated on the ground that the flags they flew did not contain the authorized number of stars, and that in some cases there was a stripe deficient.

The Consul's certificate

until the 10th, when the locality where the Chinese tea-hongs were situated was flooded to the height of one foot. The next day it was higher, by another foot, and it increased still more on the 12th, when the water was more than three feet high. The suburb Nantai, was completely flooded, and it is feared that the city itself did not escape. In some places the water was over 10 feet high, and the destruction to property and houses was incalculable, causing great misery and starvation to the unfortunates who are left homeless. The river was so swollen that the departure of the Douglas was put off till the 14th instant. On the 13th, however, the water had receded by about one foot. Dead bodies from drowning and starvation were but too plentiful, and the Chinese there were organising a relief committee. The flood was caused by the excessive rains.

The following is the order of Service of St. John's Cathedral, Hongkong, 1st Sunday after Trinity, 18th June, 1876.

In the course of the proceedings to-day at the Police Court, Mr. Dennis' Chinese Interpreter was observed to have been holding communication with a prisoner for whom Mr. Dennis appeared on an application for rehearing. The prisoner was sent to six weeks' hard labour and to be twice whipped ten strokes each time for stealing a $6 note from an Indian. The sitting Magistrate, the Hon. C. May, said he could not allow any communication by an interpreter to a solicitor with a prisoner who was in the custody of the Court. Such conduct was unseemly and improper.

Mr. Dennis observed that it was necessary for him to have communication with his client, and he had had no opportunity of doing so before.

The Magistrate said the interpreter to Mr. Holmes was despatched about the Court yesterday, holding communications with a prisoner every few minutes. Such conduct was improper and he would put a stop to it. If Mr. Dennis wished to communicate with his client, he would have no objection to his doing so himself.

Mr. Dennis replied that he did not understand Chinese sufficiently to do so. The Magistrate remarked that he did not assume in the least that Mr. Dennis was a party in any way towards concocting a defence, and he had no doubt, he would be very sorry even to hear of such a circumstance, but it was unseemly and improper for a solicitor's interpreter to be despatched about the Court and holding private communications with prisoners. There had been a freedom—an impudent freedom—which interpreters to solicitors had arrogated to themselves, assuming an importance as if they were officers of the Court, and his Worship knew what effect such an assumption of importance would have on the Chinese. He did not, however, refer to this particular instance specially. In the present case, the prisoner was convicted, and being now in Court was in the custody of the Court, and his Worship could not allow such exhibitions of impudence.

Mr. Dennis said the prisoner had been in goal all this time and he had no chance of getting instructions from him.

His Worship presumed that it was the prisoner's friends who instructed him in the matter, and reminded Mr. Dennis that this was a case of re-hearing, in which fresh evidence was to be produced to prove the prisoner's innocence, and not in support of what he had said before.

Mr. Dennis observed that the prisoner might be able to give instructions material to the case. The Magistrate said he would place the services of a Court interpreter at Mr. Dennis' disposal.

Mr. Dennis replied that it was hard he should not have the services of his own interpreter who knew all the facts of the case. His Worship proposed that a Court interpreter should be present to hear the interpretation of Mr. Dennis' interpreter.

Mr. Dennis said this was an unusual course. All instructions from a client to a solicitor were always private. The Magistrate observed that if Mr. Dennis did not consent to this proposition, he could not have any communication with the prisoner.

Mr. Dennis replied that he could not accept the proposition under the conditions stipulated. He would rather not have any communication with the prisoner.

(London and China Express.) The latest addition of two cadets has now brought the number of Japanese officers serving in the Navy up to six. Of these one was appointed to the Immortalité in 1872, another to the Raleigh in 1874, another to the Audacious in 1875, and one, who was lately attached to a ship, but is now engaged on shore, studying navigation. The last arrivals are to be appointed to the Heracles and Meteor, so it will be seen that the flagships of the China and Mediterranean Squadrons, as well as of the Channel Squadron, are each supplied with a Japanese officer. Of the total number of foreign officers at present attached to ships of the Royal Navy two-thirds are Japanese.

A first dividend of 9d. in the pound has been declared on the estate of Alexander and William Collicie.

Mr. A. Major, of Yokohama, has published what he has styled, without leave, a Supplement to Rutter's Exchange Tables, giving the calculations from 3s. 6d. to 4s. The new edition of Rutter noticed lately gives the rates to 3s. 9d.

The traffic receipts of the Great Northern Telegraph Company for the month of April were this year £1,406,916, last year £1,349,860. The total receipts from 1st January to 30th April were this year £1,355,550, last year £1,173,234.

Chinese Labour.—The Pall Mall Gazette says it is by no means improbable that in the course of the next few years the Chinese will pour themselves in shoals on the labour market of this country as they have done in California. Nor can there be a doubt that as domestic servants they will meet with a warm welcome in many a British household driven nearly to distraction by the grumbling, dishonesty, and inefficiency of cooks, housemaids, and general servants, who will also rejoice at the opportunity afforded them of handing over to these interesting strangers duties the performance of which is to themselves alike odious and degrading. When, by the help of the foreigner, the British employed has thus been rendered independent of the British employer, let us hope there will be an end of all those quarrels that have of late made the relations between the two so uncomfortable. The working man will have the opportunity for which he has so long panted of devoting his leisure time to self-culture. He will be freed, become the "thinking man," and his meditations, by enabling him to realise the dignity of his own position, will vastly increase his self-respect.

The Report of Mr. Tremlett, British Consul at Saigon, on the trade of that port for 1875, has been issued. He states that the twelve months in question do not present any marked feature for notice, the term having been marked by a quiet prosperity which has gone far towards neutralising the effects of the losses of the previous year.

The aggregate shipping has, exclusive of small steamers, been 243,377 tons, or 322 vessels, of which no less than 167,967 tons, or 201 vessels, have been British—in rough numbers, two-thirds of the entire tonnage. The export of rice has amounted to 5,590,252 piculs, the production having been on an unprecedented scale throughout the year. Of this amount 3,676,280 piculs went to China. The Consul reports that more ground is being annually brought under cultivation; and from the reports from the interior inspections the expectation was warranted that the crops for this year would be in excess even of that of 1875. In regard to imports Mr. Tremlett states that piece goods of British manufacture have met with a larger sale than before, and in fact, supply the entire wants of the colony in this class of goods.

We understand that the remaining portion of the carriages, &c., for the Woonung and Shanghai Railway have been shipped by the Glenroy, and that the line will probably be opened for passenger traffic in July. It is hoped that it will be soon extended to other places in the locality. The State of Alabama is taking out machinery for mining purposes.

The value of the Exports from the United Kingdom to the several ports and countries of the Far East for the three months ended March 31st, 1876, compared with the corresponding periods of two preceding years, is returned as follows:—

	1874.	1875.	1876.

On the 2nd inst. the screw steamship Nepaul, of 3,000 tons and 600 horse power, belonging to the P. and O. Company, and built by Messrs. Alexander, Stephen and Sons, of Linthouse, went on her trial trip, and attained a speed of 14 1/2 knots per hour.

The engines worked with perfect satisfaction throughout. She has arrived in London, and will shortly take her place on the Indian service of the Company.

On the 26th ultimo there arrived at Liverpool two American ships, the J. B. Brown, under the command of Captain Kezar, and the Southern Cross, under the command of Captain Bellard. The ships towed out through the heads at San Francisco on the morning of December 31, 1875, side by side, discharged their pilots at the same time, and passed the Farallones Islands together. Met each other the next day, and left port company that night. Met again on the line in the Pacific, and again in the neighbourhood of the Island of Pitcairn, in the South Pacific, and did not see anything of each other again until in about three or four degrees of south latitude on the Atlantic side. Here they had it hip and took for a week or ten days, closely watching each other. Finally, a circumstance took place which the master of the Southern Cross says he never experienced before during a command in the East India trade for twenty-six consecutive years. Both ships arrived on the Equator side by side, bearing by compass due east and west, and on working up their latitude they found no latitude at all, not a fraction either way, in fact they were exactly on the Equator. From this point they parted company. Met again in the N.E. trade, sailed in company for a week or so, then parted. Met again off Holyhead, and took from the same company. Towed up the Mersey side by side, and had the dock-gates been wide enough they could have entered side by side. As it was, the Cross led the way in, the Brown following within a foot of her all the way.

Police Intelligence.

(Before the Hon. C. May.)
June 17, 1876.

OBTAINING GOODS—UNDER FORGED ORDERS. Chan Aking, 19, of Poonyi, Cook, and Chan Akan, 43, of Poonyi, Coolie, were charged with obtaining goods from Messrs. Lammett, Atkinson & Co. by means of a forged order.

Mr. Samuel Fischer, stated as follows:—I am a salesman of the store of Messrs. Lammett, Atkinson & Co. of this Colony. Between 8 and 9 a.m. on the 15th inst., the first prisoner who was previously altogether unknown to me came into the store alone. He handed me a paper the same now in Court marked A, which purported to be an order for five bolts of canvas, long flax No. 2. The order is signed "Achoong," and there is a red stamp of the name "Achoong" upon it. I do not know the writing, nor do I know the stamp. I was under the impression that it was Aching, a sailmaker whom I know, and I said to the first prisoner "I haven't got this kind just now (meaning the article mentioned in the order), you had better get your master here to select what he wants." He appeared to understand what I said and then left. He returned in about 20 minutes, accompanied by the second prisoner. It strikes me that I have seen the second prisoner before, but I don't know him. I don't remember where and when I had seen him before. I asked him who he was and he said "I am Achoong." I took him to be Aching, a sailmaker. I know Aching; he is an old man, but I thought the prisoner was connected with him, but I did not make any further enquiry. I said to him "I haven't got the particular kind of canvas you want, but you can select what you want." I can't say whether the first prisoner heard what I said; I was paying attention to the second prisoner and did not pay particular attention to the first, but they both returned together. The second prisoner asked if I had any good cigars and I told him we had, and that the price was $10 a box. He said it was too dear. I said "you can get cheaper cigars at the China shops, but they are not good." To this the prisoner replied "Yes, and Captains of ships like good cigars." The five bolts of canvas were then given to him and they were carried away by two coolies. About one hour after that I made out a debit note or memo of delivery for Achoong or Aching by my coolie. He returned and said he could not find Achoong the sailmaker, and that nobody knew him. The five bolts of canvas cost $77.20. I believed everything was right before this. I heard nothing more of this case until Inspector Grey came to our office yesterday morning. The second prisoner selected the canvas alone. I looked it to the debit of Aching or Achoong, the sail-maker. I saw our five bolts of canvas again at the Charge Room. I was shown a number of prisoners in the goal compound and I picked out the second prisoner right off, but in the identification of the first prisoner I picked out a wrong man before I came upon him.

The Magistrate here observed that he must say that this was a very loose way of carrying on business, and as the case rested with this transaction, there would not be much chance of convicting the prisoners. There was no false pretence as far as he could see. Here there was Mr. Achoong, the compradore of the P. and O. Company, and one Aching, the sail-maker, who was a myth, and there was another sail-maker named Achoong, who was not known at all in the Colony. Mr. Fischer ought to have conducted his business in a more business-like manner; otherwise there would be great losses. Here he delivered goods to a man of whom he knew nothing. It would be convenient to make the other charges into separate cases. He asked if Inspector Grey had any other case against the prisoners besides Mr. Macdonochie's.

Inspector Grey replied that a similar order had been presented at Messrs. Lane, Crawford & Co.'s, but the prisoners were not identified.

His Worship asked how Mr. Kwok Aching was brought into the case as a witness.

Mr. Grey said he was not required in this case, but would be wanted in the case of MacEwen, Frickel & Co.

This case was then put off at this stage, and the second case was commenced.

ATTEMPT TO OBTAIN GOODS ON A FALSE ORDER.

Mr. Alexander Macdonochie, was called. I am the manager of MacEwen, Frickel & Co., ship-chandlers. I know the prisoners. On the 15th inst. between 1 and 2 p.m. the last prisoner who was previously unknown to me came to the store and handed a memo to me, the same now in Court. It was an order for five bolts of Manila cigars No. 1. It was signed "Achoong." It bore also a red stamp of the same name. I asked him "Who sent you with this memorandum?" He replied "Achoong." I said "Is he the P. & O. Compradore?" He answered "Yes." To make sure on this point I asked our go-down man to ask the prisoner whether it was the P. & O. Compradore who sent him. The prisoner replied in English "yes." Not being satisfied with this order, owing to the name of Mr. Kwok Aching not being properly spelled, I told the prisoner, "Very well, we will send the goods." He appeared to be anxious to get away with the goods, but when I told him we would send the goods he left without saying anything. Before sending the goods out, I asked our compradore to send round to Mr. Kwok Aching with the order for the goods. This was immediately after the prisoner had left. The reply from Mr. Kwok Aching was it was a forgery, and that a similar enquiry had been made of him by Messrs. Lane, Crawford & Co. I went to Lane, Crawford & Co. and saw the order which had been presented to them. I then went to the Charge Room and made a report to Inspector Grey, giving a description of the prisoner. I went out at 6 p.m. same day purposely to look for the prisoner. I went through Tai-pingshan, and thence to the P. & O. factory. When near the new P. & O. wharf, I saw a group of three men talking together. I recognised one man as having a similar dress on as the first prisoner had when he came to the store. But he had his back towards me and I could not see his face. The second prisoner observing that I was looking at the first prisoner jumped back as if in alarm, and I sprang forward and caught the first prisoner, who then called out loudly to the second prisoner and the other man, asking them, as I presumed, to rescue him. I showed my stick and the two men ran away. The last prisoner then said "What for takes me? Have got friends." I took him to the Queen's Road at the cross Roads and handed him to a constable, No. 554. I preferred the charge at the Charge Room. The prisoner said that another man had given him the order to present. I don't know how the second prisoner was arrested. The Magistrate asked if there was any chance of another case being got up.

Inspector Grey replied that he did not think so, and he had been round to all the foreign stores. There might be a case from the Chinese shops, as on the person of the first prisoner there were found orders on Chinese shops. One of them was purported to be an order from the Compradore of Vogel, Hagedorn, but it had not been presented. He did not think the prisoners had been very long in the Colony; they had come down from Shanghai lately.

Mr. Kwok Aching was examined.—I am a compradore to the P. & O. Company, a chamberlain and a merchant. I don't know the prisoners at all, have never seen them before. I never gave them an order for cigars; I know nothing about the order now shown me. I sign my name "Achoong" in English and not "Aching."

Yung Kang Hing, godown coolie at Messrs. MacEwen, Frickel & Co., was examined. He proved that the first prisoner was asked who "Achoong" was, and he replied "Kwok Aching, compradore of P. & O. Company." He was told that whenever Mr. Kwok Aching wanted cigars he invariably came and selected for himself. The prisoner replied "If you don't believe me, you can send the goods to him." He then left, and a letter in Chinese was sent to Mr. Kwok Aching to make enquiries.

Inspector Grey proved the arrest of the last prisoner by Mr. Macdonochie. The prisoner said that he was sent to present the order by some person. On the person of the prisoner was found a pocket book, in which were written the names of five or six foreign firms. The writing was in English. There was also some writing in Chinese. In the pocket of this book, there were some Chinese papers, and a blank form in English, the same as the one presented to Messrs. MacEwen, Frickel & Co. The prisoner was sent out with some policemen to point out the man who was said to have given him the orders for presentation.

The second prisoner was brought back in custody, also the leather box in Court. There was nothing found on the person of the second prisoner, but in the leather box, there were three pieces of clothing, four stamps, one was in English "Achoong." This stamp corresponded with the stamped name on the orders A. and B. There were eight memos or orders for different goods directed to different firms. Seven of these were in addressed envelopes. No. 1 was addressed to Messrs. Hagemann, Herbst & Co., for five bolts of Manila Cigars, No. 1, signed Ah Choong and stamped Ah Choong, dated 15th June, 1876. No. 2 was addressed to the same firm for five bolts Manila cigars No. 1, signed Tung Kee & Co., dated 17th June 1876. No. 3 was addressed to Messrs. Lammett, Atkinson & Co., for six bolts Manila cigars No. 1, signed Ah Choong, and stamped Ah Choong, dated 15th June 1876. No. 4 was directed to Messrs. Lammett, Atkinson & Co., for five bolts of Manila cigars No. 1, signed Tung Kee & Co., dated 17th June 1876. No. 5 purported to be an order on Messrs. MacEwen, Frickel & Co. for five bolts of canvas, long flax, No. 3, signed Tung Kee & Co., dated 17th June 1876. No. 6 was addressed to G. Falconer & Co. for one silver watch with a chain about cost $30; it was stamped and signed Tung Kee & Co., dated 18th June 1876. No. 7 was directed to Messrs. Chas. Gaupp & Co. for one silver watch about $20, stamped and signed Tung Kee & Co., dated 18th June 1876. No. 8 was addressed to Messrs. Lane, Crawford & Co. for five bolts of canvas, long flax, No. 3, signed Tung Kee, dated 17th June. One of the four stamps found in the box is one in English, Tung Kee & Co., and this stamp made the impressions on the orders addressed to Messrs. Falconer & Co., and Messrs. G. Gaupp & Co. The hand-writing of the eight orders was the same as that on those presented to Messrs. Lammett, Atkinson & Co., and Messrs. MacEwen, Frickel & Co. There were 67 blank forms or orders in English. There were also European ink and pens found in the box. The second prisoner denied that he had given the orders to the first prisoner to present to Messrs. Lammett, Atkinson & Co. and Messrs. MacEwen, Frickel & Co. The first prisoner, Loong Kwai Kai, Inspector Grey at the Station, was examined. The first prisoner gave the name of the second prisoner as the man who gave him the orders to present on the two firms. The second prisoner denied the charge, but the first prisoner corroborated with him and said that he did, he having gone to Lammett, Atkinson & Co., and got the five bolts of canvas. When the second prisoner was brought to the station a blind woman, said to be the wife of the second prisoner, was also taken up. She said that her husband brought the canvas home. The second prisoner thereupon remarked that the first prisoner bought the canvas at auction and brought it to him to be taken care of.

Peter Jones, P. O. No. 19, the Constable

who arrested the second defendant, was then examined. He proved the arrest, and the finding of the box, as also the five bolts of canvas.

After the examination of another Chinese witness, the prisoners were committed for trial on the two charges. Both reserved their defence and waived their notice of trial.

CORRESPONDENCE.

RIVER BOAT FARE.

To the Editor of the "CHINA MAIL."

Hongkong, June 17, 1876.

Sir,—I cannot endorse the suggestion of your correspondent "Cheops" for a reduction of the fare by the Powin when he himself states that as regards accommodation and comfort Tosca is nowhere to be found. When he travels for a change he cannot be in any hurry to arrive at his destination, and such a traveller should always prefer the slowest of the slow, that he may enjoy for a longer time the salubrious effects of sea air. Besides this consideration, your correspondent appears not to be aware that the shareholders in the Steamboat Company have not yet proved themselves disloyal to the concern by patronising the opposition. Consequently, of what they pay to the Company's steamers they receive back a portion in the shape of dividend; and so sanguine was the ex-Chairman of the shareholders' loyalty to the concern as to vouchsafe the remark at the meeting preceding the last "makee opposition."

Instead of discussing this point of reduction of fare at the forthcoming meeting, as he suggests, "Cheops" should have suggested the dissolution of what is of vital importance to the Company—"how to send the opposition to the wall."

Yours faithfully,
SIGMA.

ARRIVAL OF THE ENGLISH MAIL.

The P. & O. steamer Mongolia, Captain Coleman, from Bombay 20th ultimo, via Galle, Penang and Singapore, with the London mails of the 12th May, arrived this morning.

Galle, May 29.—The debate in the House of Lords on the Queen's Proclamation resolved itself into a rhetorical duel between Lord Selborne and the Lord Chancellor.

Different questions regarding the use of the imperial title have been asked in the House of Commons by Mr. Osborne Morgan and Sir Henry James.

The Colonies are free to adopt or to refrain from using the title of Empress. Latest accounts state that Turkish troops have gained a substantial victory over the insurgents.

A conference of the three Imperial Chancellors supporting the Austrian note, will be held at Berlin.

Prince Bismarck's proposal to transfer the Prussian railways to the empire was supported in the Diet by a decisive majority.

The amnesty agitation continues in France. The Government is generally condemned.

Sir George Balfour has called for papers with the view of establishing a thoroughly reciprocal free trade between the Colonies and the United Kingdom.

An enquiry into the loss of the Strathmore, by the Board of Trade, has commenced.

The king of Dahomey has been fined £6,000 for outrages on British subjects. He refuses to pay, but is allowed time to June.

London, May 29.—The general anxiety on account of Eastern affairs is unalloyed. Insurers at Lloyd's are asking war risks. Three more ironclads have been ordered to the Mediterranean, making the number of the British Squadron ten.

Paris, May 29.—Kitt is the winner of the French Derby, which was run yesterday.

London, May 30.—The announcement that the Sultan has been dethroned, was today officially made. His nephew, the heir presumptive, Murad Effendi, has been proclaimed Sultan in his stead.

Lord Northbrook arrived in London yesterday.

The vote of £20,000 to meet the expenses of the Prince of Wales' visit to India will not be exceeded.

Turkey is regarded unfavourably everywhere.

New York, May 30.—Telegrams from Quebec state that a great fire has broken out there, and is still raging.

London, May 30.—Obituary.—Sir William Veir Hogg, Baronet.

London, May 31.—The deposition of the Sultan was peacefully effected by the Ministers. Abdul Aziz is now a prisoner. There are rejoicings at Pera. The London Press considers that the dethronement of the Sultan favours a peaceful solution of the Turkish difficulty.

Aden, May 31.—The P. & O. steamer India, with the outward English mails of the 19th instant, sailed for Bombay at ten this morning.

London, May 31.—There has been a debate in the House of Lords in reference to the affairs in Persia. Lord Carnarvon lengthily quoting from Sir Andrew Clarke's despatches censures Governor Jervois's departure from the policy indicated therein, instead of confining his functions to the Resident's advice. Lord Carnarvon has promised to explain his future policy later. Further details are wanting in respect to the cause of the dethronement of the Sultan.

(Herald, June 5.)

We hear that there is a great amount of sickness amongst the shipping at Pagoda Anchorage—no fewer than fifty cases being at present under medical treatment.

The S. S. Glenfinlas, laden with new teas, is announced to sail today for London, but, we believe, she has been detained. Her departure, thus early, was hardly looked for, and with such a good start she should easily beat all competitors.

The tall cutting epidemic, lately noticed by our northern contemporaries, seems to have extended to this neighbourhood. We hear of two cases having occurred near Limpo. In both instances the victims were quite unable to account for the loss of their national badge.

It is rumoured that the German Squadron, now assembled at Hongkong, has received instructions to co-operate if necessary, with the English Fleet in these waters. Sir Thomas Wade's arrangements in regard to the Yunnan expedition continue to be watched with much interest in the North. The political situation is undoubtedly serious.

On Sunday morning last we witnessed a strange and somewhat unusual contest between a steam launch belonging to the Lekin officials and an ordinary "Dragon Boat"—manned by about sixteen natives. Against tide, the steam launch had decidedly the best of it; but on the return trip, when the tide was favorable, the launch could barely hold its own.

We hear that a Cargo-boat laden with tea intended for shipment to London, came to grief a few days ago near Pagoda Anchorage. A portion of the tea was damaged, but the bulk escaped any serious injury. These Cargo-boat people ought really to be more careful in the handling of their craft, especially at the present moment when every ounce of the intoxicating leaf seems to be worth its weight in silver.

H. E. the Viceroy left for Peking on Saturday last, accompanied by a numerous retinue. A large number of officials escorted His Excellency to the Chinese Custom House, where he embarked in a steam-launch for Mamo, at which place one of the Provincial gunboats was in waiting to convey the Viceroyal party to the North. Foreigners have no reason to regret the departure of this official—whose term of office in this province has undoubtedly tended to weaken the mandarinism in foreign estimation.

We learn that the Chinese officials are taking strong measures to protect the telegraph line between the Settlement and Mamo. The interruptions to the line have been very frequent of late, and the cost of replacing the stolen wire by no means trifling. As the native authorities are now in a possession of the property, they do not, of course, find it to their advantage to encourage the "Fung Shui" doctrine promulgated by them at the inception of the undertaking. Any interference with the telegraph is now regarded by them in its proper light.

Yesterday afternoon, at about 3 p.m., a wretched looking Chinaman—a native of the Chinkiang province—attempted to commit suicide by jumping off the small bridge between Nantai and Chung Chow. Timely assistance was however at hand, and the man was saved, but seemed bent upon making away with himself, for on again reaching terra firma, his first enquiry was for a few hundred cash for the purchase of sufficient opium to accomplish the end in view. The man had been at one time a wealthy Ningpo merchant but had been unfortunate in business and had taken to gambling.

Observant rovers in the public thoroughfares of the Settlement may have noticed a peculiar, although somewhat primitive, contrivance for the hand of small boys and grown-up men. The Chinese call it Tien Pao. It consists simply of two small hollow pieces of bamboo, both of which are connected by means of about three-lengths of cotton thread varying from 50 to 100 yards. With this rude and simple device animated conversations are held between persons at either end of the line one using his bamboo as a speaking trumpet while his friend

ANIMA ANCEPS.

Till death have broken
Sweet life's love-token,
Till all be spoken
That shall be said,
What dost thou praying,
O soul, and playing
With song and saying,
Things down and fled?

For this we know not—
That fresh springs flow not
And fresh griefs grow not
When men are dead;
When strange years o'er
Lover and lover,
And joys are over
And tears are shed.

If one day's sorrow
Mar the day's morn—
If man's life borrow
And man's death pay—
If souls once taken,
If lives once shaken,
Arise, awaken,
By night, by day—

Why with strong crying
And years of sighing,
Living and dying,
Fast ye and pray?
For all your weeping,
Walking and sleeping,
Death comes to reaping
And takes away.

Though time rend after Root-tree from after,
A little laughter
Is much more worth
Than thus to measure
The hour, the treasure,
The pain, the pleasure,
The death, the birth;

Grief, when days alter,
Like joy shall fall;
Song-book and psalter,
Mourning and mirth,
Live like the swallow;
Seek not to follow
Where earth is hollow
Under the earth.

Sonnets.

SPARKING much is a sign of vanity, for he that is lavish in words is a niggard in deeds.

LIFE, like some cities, is full of blind alleys, leading nowhere; the great art is to keep out of them.

Friendship is the medicine for all misfortune; but ingratitude dries up the fountain of all goodness.

In the treatment of nervous cases, he is the best physician who is the most ingenious inspirer of hope.

We ought not to quit our post without the permission of Him who commands the post of man in life.

There are few defects in our nature so glaring as not to be veiled from observation
by politeness and good-breeding.

When the million applaud you, seriously
ask yourself what harm you have done;
when they censure you, what good.

SEDUCED is not truly performed by the body of him whose heart is dissatisfied. The shell without a kernel is not fit for store.

NATHAN human applause nor human censure is to be taken as a test of the truth;
but either should set us upon testing ourselves.

There is not the least flower but seems to hold up its head, and to look pleasantly in the secret sense of the goodness of its Heavenly Maker.

THE pride of the heart is the attribute of honest men; pride of manners is that of fools; the pride of birth and rank is often the pride of dupes.

"YOU WILL GET OVER IT." Of all the stylistic applied to a bleeding heart, but is, in fact, the most wholesome. The reparative power of nature—that its medicine of which schoolmen talked such marvellous nonsense in the days when ideas stood where facts stand now—is as true of the human mind as it is of the body; and shattered joy repairs itself, happiness is restored after mutilation, wounded affection
is healed, and scars take the place of sores,
all the same in the life of man as in the life of the world—in souls as in plants. It is wonderful, when we think of it, what we do get over; some of us, certainly, with more trouble, and taking a longer time about it than others; but we all, with but few exceptions, get over everything in time, and after the due amount of despair has been undergone, the due number of tears have been shed.

It is easy to understand the passionate desperation of inexperienced youth, when things go wrong, and disappointment comes to shatter the fairy shrine that hope and fancy had busied themselves in building up out of mist wreaths and rainbows.

The boy's fever-fit of despair when cruel parents interpose with their vile prosaic calculations of how much for horses, and how much for the butcher and baker, with the maddening defeat against the artist's income that is to provide food and a home for the beloved, and consequent denial of the daughter's hand, and interruption of all intercourse for the good of both—well, he thinks that he shall never get over it! It has broken his heart, destroyed his life, ruined his happiness for ever, and there is nothing worth living for now, since Araminta is impossible. On her side, Araminta holds that it would be very nice to die and have done with the trouble of dressing for balls when Bertie is not here to see her—where, if he is there, he is not to dance with her, make sweet love in the conservatory, on the stairs, over the loo, the champagne. She thinks that, Bertie denied, her womanhood will have no more sweetness, bring her no more hope;
she will never get over it—never, she says weeping to her confidante; but next year she is the radiant wife of a well-
to-do stockbroker, and Bertie's astir-ing love-making are no more substantial than her childish dreams of dolls and doll's houses. Bertie, too, laughs at his former self, when he is a prosperous K. A., painting for guineas where formerly he was not paid in private, and meets with Araminta at the private view—she a British matron,
with her quiver full and her brown hair gray; he also the father of a family, who has done with dreams even in his art, and who pats to what "Bertie" rather than what he thinks to be the best. Ah! the Bertie and Araminta of life get over their romance with humiliating celerity; and that is the medicine which is sometimes quicker and more thorough in its operation than is quite satisfactory to the self-love of either. Submission to the inevitable is all very well in the way; but nobody likes that submission to be written when it involves the loss of himself.—Queen.

A STORY FROM MILAN.

A good story reaches us from Milan. A young nobleman of that city, of marriageable age, and master of a fortune of 10,000 francs a year, not long ago came to the conclusion that it was time for him to look out for a wife. His pursuits in life not being of the most strenuous character, he had leisure to combine amusement with research. Accordingly he advertised his want in a Milanese newspaper, requesting that every answer to the advertisement might be accompanied by the portrait of the lady who replied. A collateral result of this notice was that two or three of the best photographic artists of the city had more work on their hands than they could attend to. The direct result was sixty-five letters, with as many fair maidenly countenances as would furnish a good-sized album. The answers were in some cases accompanied by parental certificates, setting forth, in touching language, the charms and virtues of the daughters. Embarrassed by a choice of such unexpected variety and desirous to gratify that sense of humour which even the serious nature of his quest could not repress, the young man replied to each of his correspondents that, before coming to a final decision, a personal—not exactly in-terview, but inspection, would be of advantage. To each of the ladies, of course without the knowledge of the others, he sent a ticket for an orchestra stall in the Scala theatre, announcing that he himself would be in a particular box, the number and situation of which he stated. A few evenings later, the play-going public of Milan were perplexed to explain the appearance of one of the rows of stalls in that immense building. A long line of beauties, in toilettes of extreme elegance, unbroken by a single black coat, was observed. Furtively, and with trepidation, did each damsel from time to time raise her opera-glass to that box—the cynosure of many black eyes—in which the graceful youth reposed. Suddenly, and with darkened brow, did each damsel turn to the long file of her neighbours, and wonder at the magnetism which drew each glass to the one central spot. By-and-by the audience, to whom some hint of the secret had leaked out, began to give audible signs that they enjoyed the joke. The sporadic laughter of the theatre increased the confusion of the young ladies; and the con-tingent of fun turned the sporadic mirth into a general roar. At this point our informant drops a veil over the scene, concluding his narrative with the trumpet-call, "Daughters of Eve, revenge!" We question if that young man will get married in Milan.

SPORT IN ABYSSINIA.

The Earl of Mayo has just given "the public a narrative of what he did and saw" in Abyssinia, in the shape of a volume published by Mr. Murray. It is in all ways pleasant to find members of our junior nobility among our travellers to remote lands; and still more pleasant and useful when they put their impressions and ex-periences in a readable form. We all recollect how charmingly Lord Dufferin described his "Yacht Voyage in High Latitudes," how well Lord Milton and De Cadeau described their "Journey across the Rocky Mountains," how gracefully the Earl of Pembroke told us about his "Cruise in the Pacific." Books such as these do good service, and will always be welcome.

Lord Mayo and his compagnon de voyage, "H," went out on a sporting tour to Abyssinia. They got into the country at Massowah, on the coast of the Red Sea, in December 1874, and worked their way as far as the River Mareb, and afterwards to the Tackazee, where large game abounds in the neighbouring forest and jungle. His Lordship had a shot at some hippo-potami in the Tackazee. He writes:—

"I heard, in a pool behind the ford where we had crossed, an unusual noise, grunting and blowing. I went down with my gun-bearer to the edge of the river, and behold there were eight fine hippopotami disporting themselves in the river in the same way as the old river horse at the Zoo may be seen swimming about his tank. They reared themselves out of the water, and exposed their heads and part of their necks, some-times opening their enormous jaws, so that I could see their white tusks. I fired at the nearest of the herd, and hit him behind the ear. He began bleeding profusely, and waltzed round and round in the water, causing tremendous waves. At last in about half-an-hour he sank and we saw him no more."

This was unlucky, but not by any means so annoying as a "terrible-meas" which he and his fellow sportsman made with a lion and a herd of elephants a few days subse-quently. It appears that they came on some elephants and proceeded to stalk them. They were creeping along very quietly, when one of the attendants called out, "Ambassa!" which is Amharic for lion. Lord Mayo snatched hold of his "express," rushed up, and saw a fine male lion moving slowly away among the rocks. At the moment he was going to fire, "H" fired his heavy rifle close behind him, both barrels went off at once. "And I thought," says the author, "that I was shot, as mine draughts of powder is rather a large charge to let off close to one's ear. I missed the lion, so did H—I loaded again, and ran after him, and fired and missed."

The elephants, which were not more than forty or fifty yards off, went off in another direction, and the lion, passing through some trees, put up a herd of large deer. If, as the servants said, they had killed the elephants, "plenty of lions would have come to pick the bones."

From the time the travellers left Massowah up to their arrival at Tackazee, they had pretty fair general shooting. Their equipment, in the way of tents, was as complete as Edgington could make it, and blankets, lined with silk, are spoken of as great comfort. There was no lack of provisions and cooking utensils, which were brought out from London; and, what with "express" rifles, and all sorts and kinds of guns by the best makers, the sportsmen had ample means to make big game if they had only held them a little straighter and had more luck. Every facility appears to have been afforded them by His Highness the Khedive, who gave the travellers letters to the different governors of the Egyptian provinces through which they were likely to pass, also providing them with firmans. They had a retinue of efficient native Guards and servants. The party met General Kirkham, Commander-in-Chief of the Abyssinian Army. The General was formerly a steward in the P. and O. service. He left the P. and O. ship in China to join the British contingent raised by Colonel Gordon. Kirkham was badly wounded in the head and shoulder; he came home, and under Sir W. Ferguson's care, was again cured. He afterwards went to Amnesley Bay, and at the time of the Abyssinian expedition was employed by Lord Napier, of Magdala, to buy bullocks. Subsequently he got leave to go to Abyssinia, and tendering his services to the king, was made a Colonel. He drilled some Abyssinian soldiers, and in a battle which he fought against the Rehl Gombassa he gained great reputation, and for this battle (which he really won) was made Com-mander-in-Chief. The General came to visit Lord Mayo, who thus describes his first interview with him:—

"I was sitting in the tent, when suddenly I saw a fair, rather good-looking, slim man walking up to me. He was dressed in a frock coat and fudge cap, a sort of undress general's uniform."

They soon became great friends, and Kirkham was of much use to the travellers in getting them shooting and forwarding them through the country. While at the Tackazee they moved on the track of the herds of elephants, but had no success. Here Lord Mayo caught a chill one night, and found himself suffering from severe illness in the morning. From that date, Feb. 12, up to the end of the following month, when he got on board a steamer at Massowah bound for Suez, "more dead than alive," the journal is principally taken up with an account of his labours and painful journey, and of the sufferings he endured from dysentery. His friend H— left him at a place called Karoussa. H— went on to the Mareb and had fair sport. He shot four buffaloes, one leopard, one waderbird, a large furtive, and two crocodiles; he also shot some fawn and pigs, and a number of antelopes and other small birds. Determined not to come away from Abyssinia without shooting a lion, for some nights he watched over an old bullock, which they had brought down to the Tackazee with them, and was at last rewarded. The lion pounced on the bullock, and he shot him as dead as a door nail."

The real merit in Lord Mayo's book consists in the simple, honest, and frank way in which he writes. When Thackeray issued his editorial announcement in the Cornhill Magazine, No. 1, he said a kind and encouraging word, by way of invitation, to those who had never written before, and intimated, in his own forcible way, that more people could write than they them-selves were aware of. We are quite sure that our young author strung together his notes and journal without a desire to write for writing sake, and so it turns out that what he has done is fresh and unstilted. Sportsmen bound for sport in foreign lands will do well to read his practical hints. He tells them what he took out in the way of outfit and provisions; he gives them good advice about the danger of exposing them-selves to the night air; he recommends them to drink out of a silver cup, and he gives his reasons; he enjoins a little study in the way of butchering at Smithfield before going out to few game countries; and gives a great number of other useful suggestions. Altogether, Lord Mayo appears to us to be a pleasant companion, and we think the more highly of him from the fact that he is generally very ready for his dinner, and knows how to cook. To be enabled to bring down a brace of geese is one thing, but to be enabled to appreciate their livers (viscera) is another.—Land and Water.

THE GREAT BORE-ACT.

(Leith Herald.)
We have been favoured with the follow-ing, which is entitled "A Bill to Amend the Merchant Shipping Act, A.D. 1876." It is dated the 1st April—

"Be it enacted on and after the first day of April eighteen hundred and seventy-six, as follows:—

That it is to say,

1. This Act may be cited as the Great Bore Act of 1876.

2. This Act shall be construed as one and the same with all recent and future Acts on the same subject.

3. This Act shall have for its object the amelioration of the condition of the British sailor.

4. In every seaport in Great Britain and Ireland, the Isle of Man, and all the Colonies and dependencies of the British empire there shall be erected, for the free use and accommodation of the British sailor, marine residences, which shall be entitled Limp-soul Asylums.

5. The cost of building, fitting, and fur-nishing said Asylums, shall be defrayed out of a tax of twenty-one shillings per gross register ton, to be levied on all ships, steamers, or craft holding a British cer-tificate of registry. This tax shall be pay-able on the first of April first ensuing.

6. The cost of annual maintenance of the Limp-soul Asylums shall be paid out of an annual tax levied on all British tonnage; the amount of which shall be determined and assessed as the expenditure may demand.

7. The architecture, construction, and management of the Limp-soul Asylums shall be under the exclusive control of the tell-that-to-the-marines department of the Bore of Trade.

8. It shall be indispensable for every Asylum to be fitted, furnished, and maintained with the usual appliances and style of a first-class Metropolitan Club.

9. It shall be competent for every person calling himself a British sailor to live thereat and enjoy, free of all charge (no gratuities allowed to waiters), bed, board, beer, and skittles, as long and as much as he may please. The British sailor shall have the privilege at all times of intro-duce foreign seamen free of charge.

10. A true British sailor shall be ac-credited such by making an affidavit to that effect.

11. No British seaman shall at any time under any circumstances be compelled to go to sea, but the captain or owner of any ship shall from time to time have the privilege and opportunity of holding inter-views with the seamen for the purpose of conferring with them and offering them inducements to leave their Asylums and proceed to sea. The lowest sum which any captain or owner may offer any British seaman as a bonus shall be ten pounds sterling; but it shall not be obligatory for any British seaman to accept such sum or any other sum; but any British sailor shall be permitted to accept any sum or sums exceeding one hundred pounds sterling—unless it be presented in the form of wines or spirits, tobacco, or other.

12. When a British seaman leaves his home or Asylum to join a ship he shall prior thereto be presented (at the cost of the owner) with a solid gold ring, bearing the name "Limp-soul"—such ring shall be properly surveyed by a competent surveyor of the Bore of Trade. In every instance shall the British seaman be transported to his ship or vessel in a carriage drawn by not less than two, but not exceeding four horses, and it shall be competent for every British sailor to be accompanied by his wife or wives at all times and in all places—but it shall not be deemed compulsory for any British sailor to produce certificates of marriage.

13. Proper lodgings shall be provided for the British sailor. Inasmuch as it is the duty of the captain and his officers to keep a proper look-out and safely navigate the ship—they shall live in a place fitted for them at the bow of the ship. They will thus be enabled to avoid collision by seeing far ahead, which has hitherto been pre-vented by their residence in the after body of the ship. But the owner of British sailors shall, without any exception whatever, be comfortably lodged in large and airy apartments provided for their occupancy and use, in the after cabins of the ship. To ensure the comfort of the British sailor every man shall be furnished with a gilded room measuring not less than twelve feet square and eight feet high. There shall be a large saloon in every British ship for the British sailors to meet together in, apart from the captain and officers, who shall only be permitted by a vote of a majority of the crew to have the privilege of dining with the crew once in six months. There shall likewise be an exclusive saloon appointed, fitted, and furnished, specially for the fumigation and massing of American gold-leaf tobacco. But no ship shall be considered seaworthy unless she is furnished with a billiard saloon fitted with self-adjusting Bessemer swing table, and the requisite number of balls. No ship shall on any account whatever, be per-mitted to leave a port without having this table carefully adjusted by competent Bore of Trade surveyors. The Bore of Trade surveyors shall likewise be specially bound to interdict the clearance of any ship unless the balls, and every one of them, is properly loaded and marked with a disc show-ing plainly the load line of each ball. In the case of white balls a red disc, and in the case of red balls a white disc. The adjustment of this table and the balls being indispensable to the efficiency of the British sailor and the seaworthiness of the ship, any shipowner sending, or attempting to send, his ship to sea without conforming to this statute, and against the opinion of the competent surveyors of the Bore of Trade, shall be subject to a penalty not exceeding £500 sterling.

14. Proper food shall be provided for the British sailor. Salt beef, salt pork, and hard biscuits are hereby and henceforth abolished. Every vessel shall carry not less than one cook to every five persons, but in the case of large East Indian men one cook to every six persons. The cooking stools shall include one or more French stools with skill in the preparation of choice dishes, and it shall be absolutely indispen-sable to the thorough seaworthiness of the ship that every cook, as well as all his utensils, shall pass the examination of one or more competent surveyors of the Bore of Trade.

15. The tween decks of all ships shall be used exclusively as pens for cattle, sheep, pigs, and poultry, for the exclusive use and nourishment of the British sailor, and the lower hold for cargo except what may be required for food and water for the stock. But there shall be set apart in all ships exceeding a thousand tons register sufficient space in the between decks for a ball room for the British sailor, and such ships shall without exception carry a corps de ballet (nimble and expert in the mysteries of terpsichore) and suitable staff of musicians. But it is indispensable that all these should be examined and approved by competent surveyors of the Bore of Trade. In this way the comfort and health of the British sailor will be secured.

16. The forehold (that is the space be-fore the collision bulkhead) in every ship shall be exclusively fitted and furnished with wine and beer cellar, and lenden pipes shall be carried thence to the quarters of the British sailor. Into every room such pipes shall be led, and they shall be properly fitted with hydraulic taps or draw pipes. No spirits shall be carried down the forehold in cases of fire, but a tank sufficient to contain 5,000 gallons shall be built upon the main deck—a part of the solid structure of the hull—and shall consist of or be divided into fire compartments, holding respectively 1,000 gallons of rum, whisky, brandy, gin, Holland, which shall be for the exclusive use of the British sailor at all times of the day or night. It shall not be compulsory for the owner to furnish soda, seltzer, or Apollonaris water to the crew. All the arrangements in this department shall be carefully tested and approved by competent surveyors of the Bore of Trade.

17. At no time during the currency of any voyage shall any Captain or any Officers order or command any member of the crew without using polite introductory language, and it shall not be compulsory for any member of the crew to obey any order or command unless he, as an intelligent British sailor, is himself satisfied and convinced that it is a proper order.

18. In wet weather the crew shall, each and every of them, be furnished (at the cost of the owner) with Sangster's extra thick double-ribbed umbrella. And it is absolutely compulsory (otherwise it shall be prevented by the Bore of Trade) that all such glass umbrellas shall have been thoroughly inspected and approved by a competent surveyor or surveyors of the Bore of Trade, under a penalty for each defective umbrella of £50. But owners shall have the option by admitting in their articles or contract with the crew the clause, "during inclement or disagreeable weather, the crew are to remain in their cabins, gratified in flannel and with hot bottles at their feet"—of only supplying parasols of alpaca or cotton. But no ship shall be deemed seaworthy unless the umbrellas, parasols, or others, or sun shades, are of an ultramarine colour and stilted with cut-gut.

19. If any work is at any time required involving the manual exertion of the British sailor, he shall at all times and under all circumstances be provided with white kid gloves, which prior to the sailing of every ship from the United Kingdom, shall have been inspected and approved by competent surveyors of the Bore of Trade. If at any time such surveyors discern that the hide of dogs, cats, rats, mice, weasels, badgers, or others, has been substituted for fine blacked French kid, the owners of every ship found so in default shall be subject to a penalty not exceeding £50 sterling for every defective pair. It is also indispen-

SPELLING BEES.

If we are to believe Professor Max Müller, the spelling bees will have an easy time of it in another generation or so. In a very interesting article in the Fortnightly Review, he explains the system of phonetic spelling, and shows the good that would result from its general use. He further shows that so far from being destroyed by phonetic spelling, the historical and etymological characteristics of the English language, in many cases, would be rendered more distinct; and that "taken as a whole, the loss occasioned by consistent phonetic spelling, would hardly be greater than the gain." But the loss, if any, to the historical and etymological student of language ought not to be considered when the enormous gain to national education is taken into account. Of the millions of children, who in England under the present system re-quire, on the teacher's authority, some four or five years to learn to read, but a small proportion ever succeed in learning thoroughly and with real advantage to themselves. In contrast to this, we have the following, with reference to the phonetic system. Careful experiments in teaching children of various ages and ranks, and even rascals and criminal adults, have established that pupils may be taught to read books in phonetic print slowly but surely in from ten to forty hours, and will attain a considerable proficiency after a few weeks' practice; that when the pupils have attained fluency in reading from phonetic print, a very few hours suffice to give them the same fluency in reading ordinary print. An example is given of a little boy a few months more than four years old, who learnt to read any phonetic book without the slightest hesitation; the longest and hardest names in the Old and New Testaments proving no obstacle; and the know-ledge was imparted to him in something less than eight hours. The Professor gives a specimen page of phonetic spelling on the Pitman system, in which some new letters are introduced into the present alphabet; and yet but little exertion is required to read it almost as readily as an ordinary English-spelt page; nor would it give any one much trouble to maintain that no one letters or system of spelling. The Profes-sor concludes by maintaining that no one defends the present system of spelling; that everybody admits the practical advan-tages of phonetic spelling, and that sooner or later a reform in every written language is inevitable.

20. Every British ship proceeding to sea shall be compelled to carry in addition to boats and lifeboats the following articles for the safety of the crew, viz.—For each man a Boyton patent swimming dress, and portable floating provision tank, containing not less than a month's food and drink, a looking-glass, a galvanic battery, thirty pounds of tobacco—a gross of matches, four gallons of choice brandy, and a sharp-pointed spear, twenty feet long, to engage the sea serpent. All which must be examined and approved by competent surveyors of the Bore of Trade.

21. No British ship shall under any circumstances proceed at any time during her voyage further than one statute mile from the shore, it being deemed unsafe to go into deep water with the British sailor. It shall therefore be compulsory for all ships on all voyages to hug the land.

22. No British ship shall on any account whatever encounter any storm, and if it be found on examination of the log book that the force of the wind has at any time ex-ceeded Zero (See Meteorological formulae for force of wind) every owner of a British ship so exposing the lives of the British sailor shall be liable to being arraigned on a charge of culpable homicide in event of his being lost.

23. It shall be compulsory for all British ships, wherever they may be, at all times from dusk to daylight, to anchor.

24. If any British shipmaster observes a ship or vessel coming in the opposite direc-tion he shall immediately stop his ship until he knows what the other ship does. If in doubt at once anchor. The crew must be piped to quarters, and splice the main brace. This shall be the only seamanship compulsory on the British sailor.

25. The safety of the crew shall be specially and exclusively the object of the shipmaster, and in hot weather, besides the previous provisions of the Act, it shall not be compulsory for any British sailor to obey any command or order of the captain or officer requiring his presence on deck, until by the unanimous vote of the crew the sun is ascertained to be over the fore yard. This matter shall be determined by properly consulting and reducing the cubical contents of the spirit tank on deck by the terms of the Act already provided for in Section 16.

26. If any captain or owner of any British ship causes any British sailor, under any circumstances, to get wetted with salt or with fresh water whereby he may catch cold and possibly die, he or they or both of them shall be liable to prosecution for culpable homicide.

JONES' TRAVELLING ALLOWANCE—A MORE OR LESS TRUE TALE.

Jones was a young man; scarce 23 indif-ferent years had passed over Jones' head, and he was in the Unconvinced service.

One never-to-be-forgotten month Jones' travelling allowance was cut.

The Supreme Government refused to pay Rs. 3, as 2, pie 1, on the ground that Jones' addition and multiplication were faulty; as exemplified in his demand for travelling allowance by rail. Now, Jones had spent hours with a railway guide and a pencil, and he had hoped he was not defraud-ing the population of India in this matter.

Jones remonstrated, and his remonstrance was unanswered. He then went to the financial offices of Government, and woke up three able Brahmin financiers. They yawned, and scratched their heads with their pens, which they routed out from be-hind their ears for that purpose.

Jones said—"You've cut me Rs. 3, as 2, pie 1. Why have you done so?"

An able Brahmin financier replied, "You must write in officially."

Jones said—"I have written, and the valuable document is in your possession."

"Then you must write in officially and say so," answered the still sleepy financier.

Ten years have now passed away, and the Correspondence on the subject of Jones' travelling allowance has cost a large sum of money, but it is still as it was before.

Jones went again to the financial offices. There were three other financiers; who woke up and scratched their heads and yawned.

Jones said—"I want my travelling allow-ance—Rs. 3, as 2, pie 1."

One financier said—"You must write in officially."

Jones said—"I have done so. My first letter was sent in ten years ago."

Another financier remarked—"You must write in and say so, (officially)."

Twenty years have now gone, and Jones will soon be fifty-five; and being an ex-perienced and valuable officer, will have to retire. He has not yet got his travelling allowance, but is full of hope.

He went again to the financial offices. A grey-headed, but still able Brahmin finan-cier stopped his fiancings with a final snort when Jones came in, yawned, and scratched his head.

Jones said—"I want my travelling allow-ance—Rs. 3, as 2, pie 1."

"You must write in officially," was the answer; with which Jones was becoming familiar.

"For thirty years I have been writing in officially," said Jones, "and I am almost becoming impatient."

"I think your name must be 'Jones,'" said the financier. "I remember seeing some document referring to your allowance."

"So do I," answered the now excited Jones. "I can remember some few car-tloads of documents on that subject."

"It has gone on to the Government of India," yawned a Brahminical but able financier, from a corner.

"When will it come back?" asked Jones. "We can't say, sir, but it usually takes about the same time to come back as it does to go."

Jones went to his home, and resigned. He made a present of the money to the po-pulation of India.

Jones is now dead. An official letter has come to the Bombay Government, sanction-ing the "disbursement" of Rs. 3, as 2, pie on account of travelling allowances due to Mr. Jones, of the Bombay U. C. S.

As Mr. Jones retired 20 years ago, and is no longer living, it cannot be paid to him. A correspondence is therefore going on as to what is to be done with the money.

In twenty years more it may be settled.—Bombay Gazette.

Miscellaneous.

APPROPOS of the question of the purchase of the Suez shares, which has again been incidentally raised in the House of Com-mons, it may not be wholly inappropriate to mention that the possible construction of another and competing canal through Egypt, to connect the Mediterranean and the Red Sea was at one period under the notice of the Khedive, and that the question of the project was referred to Sir John Hawkshaw, whose opinion, from an engineering point of view, was not unfavourable to the project.

In the midst of these anxieties about the political situation in Europe, which, had there been a threat of war, could hardly have been more potent in depressing public securities, come all sorts of rumours about the abdication of the Czar—the temporary abdication—which, with the explanation afforded, are significant. There is great uneasiness at St. Petersburg. The Em-peror's plans for the next few months, we are told, have all been changed. The condition of abdication, we are to under-stand, is an outbreak of war. If there is peace, the Emperor will not find it neces-sary to go into retirement; but it is said to be inconceivable that the Emperor has declared that he could not bear the strain of a war. As soon as the interests of Russia should make it impossible to avoid a war between any Emperor or Power, he will abdicate—that is the St. Petersburg news, and the correspondents of our daily contemporaries at St. Petersburg, Berlin, and Vienna are distinctly of one mind. They are either one and all alarmists, or the situation is critical.

"BENZENE, Sept. 1869.—Gentlemen, I feel it a duty I owe to you to express my gratitude for the greatest benefit I have re-ceived by taking 'Norton's Camomile Pills.' I applied to your agent, Mr. Ball, Berkeley, for the above-named pills, for which I paid the sum of 10s. for which I suffered excruciating pain for a length of time, having tried nearly every remedy prescribed, but with-out deriving any benefit at all. After taking two bottles of your valuable pills, I was quite restored to my usual state of health. Please give this publicity for the benefit of those who may thus be relieved. I am, Sir, yours truly, HENRY ALLYAN.
